Some details of Hercules' life, including the Labour of Geryon

Hercules, heros Graecus, a Iunone maxime vexabatur. dea enim eum oderat, quod pater Herculis erat Iuppiter, rex deorum et maritus Iunonis. Juno igitur irata erat et hunc hominem puniebat. postquam Herculem insanum fecerat, Iuno multos labores ei imposuit, sperans eum miserrimum futurum esse. unus laborum difficillimus erat: Hercules iter ad Italiam facere debebat, ubi gigantem, Geryonem, superare necesse erat.

Geryon, qui tria corpora ingentia habebat, hostis terribilis erat. Hercules iussus erat, Geryone necato, agere vaccas gigantis ad regem Eurystheum, qui in Graecia habitabat. Italiam ergo profectus, Hercules Geryonem necavit. deinde auxilio deae Minervae, quae Herculi favebat, vaccas ad Graeciam ducebat, gaudens quod laborem confecerat. prima parte itineris facta, Hercules tam fessus erat ut paucos dies prope flumen quiescere constitueret. vaccas deligavit ne auferrentur. Hercules nesciebat alterum monstrum in monte proximo habitare. cum heros dormiret, hoc monstrum, nomine Cacus, vaccis appropinquavit ut cenam pararet. sibi dixit 'multas vaccas conspicio; paucas domum ducam.' duas vaccas igitur domum traxit.

sole orto, Hercules surrexit, nihil suspicans. sed cum vaccas numeravisset, duas abesse vidit. sibi dixit, ‘sine dubio duas vaccas amisi; si latronem qui hoc fecit inveniam, ille poenas dabitvos abstulit?’ nihil tamen audiri poterat. tandem Hercules proficisci constituit. sed dum vaccas instruit, mugitus duarum ablatarum vaccarum auditus est. cum Hercules hoc audivisset, sine mora, ferociter clamans, ad antrum Caci cucurrit ut ultionem peteret. 4
