GUY MORGAN

1931-1956

Welsh international centre

Guy Morgan came to Radley in January, 1931, with the reputation of being the finest centre three-quarter in the British Isles. He had been four years in the Cambridge XV, and had obtained eight International Caps for Wales. In addition, he had captained both his country and his university. He had played Cricket with success for Glamorgan, and it was plain from the beginning that his ability and experience were going to be of enormous value to Radley on every acre of the Pitch.

It is true to say that no-one has done more to help Radleians play their games in the right way. His wise advice and his very kindly criticisms continued to be at the disposal of masters and boys long after he was crippled with arthritis, and in recent years, there was no more familiar sight at Radley, at all times of the year, than Guy's electric "chariot" always surrounded by friends of all ages, delighting in his comments on the game he was watching, and listening to his reminiscences which were always told with a keen and quizzical sense of humour. I started with Rusch Thompson in Midgets followed in the Colts by the great rugby tactician Johnny Marshall who had played for Oxford and Scotland, followed by three years with the incomparable Derek Ashcroft (Oxford and Quins and so very nearly England) who had taken over from Guy Morgan filling his boots and then some.

Coaches & Captains 1960s-2000s

... A gathering in Mansion of the illustrious 1965 team, along with their much-respected master and coach James Batten ... The only talk was of past rugby tales and you felt that these former warriors could tighten their laces, adjust their scrum caps and spill out on to Bigside ready to do battle with the opposition.

I was standing with James Batten, lost in the shadow of a Radley rugby legend. I left Mansion realising how precious was the Master i/c Rugby baton and how this had been passed down the generations... (Richard Greed)

'Rugby is a simple, strategic game, although the decision-making processes are the complex part of this beautiful sport.

We looked at our players, identified the powerful runners and built a game plan around getting the ball into their hands as often as possible.

A simple structure, clear understanding of where the ball was going and precise running lines.

It involved, as ever, a commitment of effort , sustaining intensity throughout the demanding term.
